Interviewing and Counseling Scaldo	FL-DSRL-998	2	INTERVIEWING AND COUNSELING: In this course, students will learn different approaches to client counseling. Students will learn how to complete a description of the client's case. This includes an initial assessment of the issues presented by the client and then identification of available alternatives. Students will learn the rules of professional conduct that apply to confidentiality and fee agreements. Students should be able to explain the rules of confidentiality to the client and to provide basic information about fee agreements. After the students learn how to describe the client's case, the next step will be for the students to effectively discuss legal and nonlegal alternatives that are available to the client. To do this, students will work with their clients to identify options to resolve the issues presented and then reach an agreement as to what options are viable and what options are not. Students will learn what alternatives are available in various legal settings. Specifically, students will become familiar with the advantages and disadvantages of mediation, arbitration, trial, and informal settlement negotiations. The students will learn that there are Simulation that attorneys can use to be able to work effectively with individuals from different cultures and backgrounds. At the completion of this course, students should understand the basic framework of legal interviewing and counseling as well as acquire a deeper understanding of the Simulation necessary to conduct an effective client counseling session. This is a simulation course that provides substantial experience not involving an actual client, that (1) is reasonably similar to the experience of a lawyer advising or representing a client or engaging in other lawyering tasks in a set of facts and circumstances devised or adopted by a faculty member, and (2) includes the following: (i) direct supervision of the student's performance by the faculty member; (ii) opportunities for performance, feedback from a faculty member, and self-evaluation; and (iii) a classroom instructional component. Health Law	FL-HLTH-300	2	HEALTH LAW: This course is an introduction to the regulation of the American health care system and the physician-patient relationship. Healthcare is one of the most regulated industries in the United States and currently accounts for approximately 18 percent of the U.S. gross domestic product. In addition, the industry is going through a tremendous restructuring in how health care is organized, delivered, and paid for, in part as a result of the Affordable Care Act (more commonly referred to as "Obamacare") and in part due to market forces and technological developments. This course provides students with an understanding of the laws governing the physician-patient relationship and how the health care system is currently organized, financed, and regulated.
